> Fashionable Tailored Autumn Suits. "No ripple of fullness will be visible anywhere in the tailored suits for autumn," says Grace Margaret Gould, in Woman's Home Companion. "Skirts will be short and very close cut. But Paris goes too far, she becomes very far off when she advocates a skirt a yard and a half around. If the American woman wore a skimpy skirt of this sort, she would never be able to walk gracefully, and hopping is not exactly in her line Paris makes a mistake when she dictates e American women the absurd.

> "However, all the new skirts will have the long, narrow effect. Even the sleeves of the tailored suits will carry out this idea. They will be long and plain, and put in at the shoulder without any fullness whatever. And it is quite noticeable that as they near the wrist they will widen out a trifle just to emphasize the straight-line effect.

"The twenty-four-inch-length coat will be more fashionable than the thirty-inch and the twenty-six-inch and the twentyeight-inch lengths will undoubtedly be the most popular of all. A number of the new short coats suggest the box coat of other seasons. Since the coat of the tailored suit is to be short, this brings nto fashion again the very long separate oat, which is here, and here to stay throughout the fall and winter, for in dress, like many other things, variety is relcomed by the American woman.

Beef Olives.

Have very thinly sliced one pound of beef from the julcy side of the round. remove the skin and fat, and divide equally into ten oblong pieces. Have a forcemeat prepared of two tablespoonfuls of chopped suct, four heaping tablespoonfuls of bread crumbs, one tablespoonful of chopped parsley, seasoning of salt pepper, and nutmeg, and one large beaten egg. Put a spoonful on each piece of meat rolled up, fasten each with a short skewer, and braise for two hours. Remove the skewers. Arrange the olives neatly in a circle on a hot platter and strain the sauce over them.

Lobster Salad.

Take the flesh of a cooked lobster. If the shell is to be used, brush while hot with salad oil, then brush off again. Break the lobster's head from the tail, remove flesh from the body and claws. Cut into neat pieces. Wash and shred some salad finely, put some of it into a salad dish, then some slices of lobster piled in the center and coat with mayonnaise dressing. Place the head at one end and the tail at the other. Make a lattice work of anchovy fillets, and a gherkin cut like a fan at the other. Keep on ice till required.

LATEST FASHION.

GIRLS' DRESS. All Seams Allowed.

It is now time to be planning the young girl's wardrobe for the next school year, and several dresses are an absolute necessity, in order that she may always appear neat and well dressed. The design is one which may be used to advantage at this time, and may be developed in almost any material suitable for the season and the occasion. The front yoke and panel are cut in one plece, and the required fullness in the body is obtained by the use of short tucks in the front and back. Joined to the panel front is the skirt in the popular side-pleated style; the sleeves are the regulation puff, joined to a deep cuff. The straps over the shoulder may be omitted, if desired. A heavy linen, repp or gingham may be used for the early season with a trimming of insertion or braid, while later the woolen goods can be made up with equal success. The pattern (5103) is cut in sizes 6 to 12 years. To make the garment in the medium size will require 3% yards of material 27 inches wide, 2% yards 44 inches wide; 41/2 yards of braid

The above pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this

By FRANCES JAY.

Commenting on the feat of ball catching from the top of the Washington Monument, when Billy Sullivan received in his hands, three times, balls dropped from the summit of the shaft, a couple of Treasury clerks were reminded of the old story of a certain furry ball that once came along the same route at even greater rate of speed, and and in a pair of capable hands, but flat on in a pair of capable hands, but flat on without disaster. MORNING CHIT-CHAT.

AN you talk small talk? If you can be thankful.

If you can't, suppose you learn to.

I don't believe you will regret the effort. It is splendid to be able to talk well on deep and important subjects, but that ability does not by any means do away with the need of being able to talk lightly and easily on unimportant subjects. And the man or woman who considers that it does, and despises small talk, I think, makes a great mistake. Small talk is the small coin of social intercourse, and as such no one can afford to be without it. It is splendid to have a wallet stuffed full of twenty and fifty dollar bills and big checks, but it is decidedly inconvenient to have no smaller

Yes, of course, one would prefer to have the bills and do without the small change to having things the other way around, but why not have both? Some years ago a young newspaper man of decided genius, a brilliant conversationalist when talking on some of his favorite subjects, came to call on me. I introduced him to my mother, and what do you suppose his first remark after the "Pleased to meet you" was?

"Would you like to know my idea of the universe?"

And forthwith he expounded it to her. Imagine it.

His idea of the universe was tather original and worth hearing to be sure, but wasn't his offering it as an opening remark about as absurd as passing your newsboy a hundred-dollar check to pay for your morn-Now I certainly wouldn't want that man to lose one bit of his originality and depth of thought, or the least iota of his ability to talk fascinatingly on deep subjects, but I do think it would smooth his future path for him if he could learn to talk small talk on occasions. To be able to talk witty and sparkling small talk is a fine art-a genious before which I bow in deep admiration.

I listen to people who can do that with the same enjoyment with which I watch a game of tennis between skillful players. That, however, is a gift. We cannot all possess it.

But by conscientiously forcing ourselves to practice it whenever occasion arises. I think we can all learn to talk decently creditable small talk.

And don't you think that's worth while?
